Fully Documented: 1969 Chevrolet Camaro. Adam Clarke. I was going to say that there is nothing that generates buyer interest quite like an original classic car that has spent its entire life in California that has been listed for sale. However, if that car is listed in a No Reserve auction, then that's an entirely different kettle of fish.

The mechanical underpinnings of the 1969 Chevrolet Camaro remained the same, as did the hood, roof and deck lid, but the fenders, nose, and quarter panels were all updated and made for an overall more aggressive appearance. Up front, the grille featured an angled "V" design, allowing the headlights to be more deeply inset.
